

Notes on Contributors

RONALD BARNETT is Professor of Higher Education at the Institute of Education, University of London where he is a member of the Institute's School of Lifelong Education and International Development. Ronald Barnett is an authority on the conceptual basis of the university and higher education. His books include The Idea of Higher Education and Realizing the University in an Age of Supercomplexity. and his most recent book is Beyond All Reason: living with ideology in the university (Open University Press, 2003).

PAUL HAGER is Professor of Education at the University of Technology, Sydney. His research interests include philosophy of adult and vocational education, workplace learning, and professional practice. His latest book, published by Routledge, is Life, Work and Learning: practice in postmodernity (Beckett & Hager, 2002).

DAVID HALPIN is Professor of Education and Head of the School of Curriculum, Pedagogy & Assessment at the Institute of Education, University of London, where he is also Editor-in-Residence of this Journal. His most recent book, published last year by RoutledgeFalmer, is Hope and Education: the role of the utopian imagination.

CATHARINE C. KNIGHT is an Associate Professor of Education in the Department of Educational Foundations and Leadership at The University of Akron, Ohio, USA. As a Post-Doctoral Fellow, she applied neo-Piagetian theory to the study of the development of early reading skills. Currently she teaches educational psychology and cognitive development, and researches learning and development in learners across the lifespan.

STEWART RANSON is Professor of Education in the School of Education at the University of Birmingham. He has been leading two projects (for ESRC Democracy and Participation Programme and the National Assembly for Wales) on the relationship between governance and school improvement.

ERICA SMITH is Associate Professor of Vocational Education and Training at Charles Sturt University, Wagga Wagga campus. Her research interests include VET policy, competency-based training, the school to work transition, and apprenticeships.

ROSEMARY E. SUTTON is a Professor of Education in the Department of Curriculum and Foundations in the College of Education of Cleveland State University, Ohio, USA. Recently, she has conducted workshops focused on preparing teacher-mentors for the new Ohio (USA) licensure standards, and has worked with the National Board Certification of Teachers (USA).